London, ON - On June 22, 2016 at the joint Board of Directors' meeting of Sexual Assault Centre London and Women's Community House, both Boards unanimously agreed to become one organization! Driven by the idea that better services could be provided for those impacted by woman abuse and sexual violence and after two years of careful study and relationship-building across the two organizations, it was decided to move ahead and become a unified organization!

In the words of the Boards of Directors chairs:

"We know that we will be stronger together! The time is now for us to strengthen our presence in our community and continue to create communities of safe spaces and advocate for social and political change." [Jennifer Noel, Chair, Sexual Assault Centre London]

We believe that together, and with our many partners and those with lived experience, we can make this vision a reality! We are excited about this possibility! [Anne Baxter, Chair, Women's Community House]

Over the coming months they will begin the integration process and will be moving toward full unification by October 31, 2016 with the public launch in January 2017.
